TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

Russian Racket.

St. Petersburg, 26.—The trial of thirty-six nihilists belonging to the Teorist faction, will take place on February 21, before the whole court sitting with closed doors.

Thundering Fanny.

Milwaukee, 27.—Some admirers of Judge Porter sent him the following upon hearing of the verdict in the Guiteau case: "The verdict of guilty will go thundering down the ages."

Mrs. Scoville.

Chicago, 27.—Mrs. Scoville who has kept herself aloof from reporters since the news of the conclusion of the Guiteau trial, was asked last night if there was any truth in the story that her husband was about to apply for a divorce on the ground of insanity. She expressed great surprise, and indignantly repudiated the suggestion as ridiculous and untrue. She showed this dispatch:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26, 2:35 p.m.
Mrs. Frances Scoville, Chicago.

Have written fully. Nothing new. Remain quietly at home. Imperative. (Signed) GEO. SCOVILLE.

He put "imperative" in because he feared that she would start out upon receiving the news from her brother, J. W. Scoville, that the verdict was guilty, and could not be otherwise under the judges' charge. She did not think the verdict settled anything, but it was prejudicial, for it probably saved Charles from a mob. The next time the case is tried the result will be different.

Teller and Sherman.

Washington, 27.—Senator Teller, in discussing the Sherman funding bill, this afternoon, indulged in some criticism upon the republican side of the Senate. He said the majority of republican senators, were seeking to perpetuate the national debt, in the interest of national banks; that a majority of the republican senators were wedded to the national bank system, and were looking out for its interests. He also condemned the present protective tariff, and said it was not such as he people desire. Teller said he did not like to fly in the face of his party. That he was voting here with democrats on these questions, but he was raised in the democratic faith, and when that party failed to represent his sentiments, he had courage to leave it, and he was not going to be bound by any party ties nor to vote against his conviction.

Senator Sherman denied that he was seeking to perpetuate the national debt, and thus continue the burdens of taxation. He was trying to save the people $1,000,000 a year, and was not in the interest of bondholders.

The Clayton-Bulwer Treaty.

Washington, 27.—Granville, in his letter to Hopper, said the British Government rely upon the observance of all engagements of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. In response Blaine wrote to Lowell on November 29, 1881, saying: "I regret that Hopper should not have advised me by telegraph of the purport of his Lordship's reply, as it would have enabled me to present the arguments of my dispatch of the 19th instant in more specific forms, as meeting the positive issue rather than as generally dealing with a subject which for thirty years has been regarded in but one light by the public opinion of the United States. Blaine then gives a lengthy summary of the historical objections to the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and the very decided differences of opinion between the governments to which its interpretation has given rise, and concludes with a statement that the terms of the treaty are mutually vexatious, and the object of government is to free the treaty from its embarrassing features."
